Chase Buchanan

PRIVATE WEALTH MANAGEMENT

Tim joined private practice in October 1987 having previously served as a District Inspector for the former Inland Revenue. He has over 45 years experience in taxation and offers practical advice that draws heavily on his experience, lateral thinking and common sense.

Tim's interest in non-UK taxation originated during the final years of his service with the Inland Revenue, and Tim consolidated this by becoming a member of the Society or Trust and Estate Practitioners in 1993 and a Fellow of the Chartered Institute of Taxation in 1994. Tim moved his career to London originally in 1999 and having worked for most of his time subsequently in London, joined Numera Partners LLP, a small and growing accounting practice in Finchley in 2012 as a partner. In 2020 he changed his position to that of Consultant and is also a consultant to two other professional practices, Chelepis Watson based in south London and Specialist Taxation Services (Europe) Ltd based in the North-West of England.

Tim consistently avoids artificial planning, which he recognises as at risk long before the UK Government introduced legislation to combat aggressive avoidance. He also provides technical advice in tax investigation cases where there is a genuine 'offshore' element and complex anti-avoidance legislation to be analysed and has achieved significant reductions in tax for clients through his knowledge.

In his leisure time, Tim is an amateur reader of history and likes the occasional glass of wine. He also enjoys swimming and cycling for pleasure. He has been happily married to Kathryn for thirty five years. Tim and Kathryn have an adult son, Owain, who is pursuing a career in environmental consultancy.
